with John Boles '65

the William P. Hobby Professor of History, and editor, Journal of Southern History, 1983–2013

You and a guest will spend a week with renowned historian and popular Rice tour group leader John Boles '65 retracing the life and times of our Founding Fathers in Colonial Virginia. Begin with Virginia's earliest colonial settlements in Jamestown and Williamsburg, enjoying special access to heritage sites and historic buildings. Learn about the dramatic conclusion of the Revolutionary War at the Yorktown battlefield, and spend a day exploring beautiful Colonial-era plantation homes and landscapes along the James River. A stop in Richmond allows you to explore the Thomas Jefferson designed state capital and relive Patrick Henry's "Give me liberty, or give me death!" speech. In the Appalachian foothills, the world of Thomas Jefferson comes even more fully to life with a private tour at his iconic Monticello and a personalized look at his elegant University of Virginia campus. The itinerary concludes with a tour of the quaint tree-lined streets of Old Town Alexandria and a customized in-depth tour of George Washington's Mount Vernon plantation.

With Boles' lectures and frequent commentary throughout the itinerary, this program is a once-in-a-lifetime chance for those interested in America's colonial history to learn about the politics, society, economics and culture of 18th-century Virginia, visiting one beautiful historical site after another. The tour will focus on political and military history, but also other issues that were critical to early America: slavery, immigration, tobacco and agriculture.

Geoffrey Winningham '65

*Lynette S. Autrey Professor of Humanities
Professor of Visual Arts*

2. 'Of the Soil: Photographs of Vernacular Architecture and Stories of Changing Times in Arkansas'

In the early 1980s, Geoff Winningham traveled throughout Arkansas, locating and photographing examples of classic southern American vernacular architecture: dogtrot cabins, country stores, wood frame churches and one-of-a-kind hog houses — local buildings remembered by local people. He photographed over 3,000 structures, amassing an important archive. Three decades later, Winningham reopened his archive and began to structure a book. That same year, he returned to Arkansas, revisiting many of the sites he had photographed. Most of the buildings had disappeared, victims of fires, storms or human neglect. What he found were locals who remembered the buildings. After listening to their recollections and observations, he wrote 21 stories that accompany the photographs in "Of the Soil" (University of Arkansas Press, 2014). At this dinner hosted in the home of Liz Howard Crowell '76 and Steven G. Crowell, Winningham will discuss the photographs and read stories from his book.

3. Nanotechnology Enabled Water Treatment (NEWT) Systems

In this presentation, Pedro Alvarez will discuss NEWT, a new interdisciplinary, multi-institution nanosystems engineering research center, headquartered at Rice University. NEWT's goal is to facilitate access to clean water almost anywhere in the world by developing efficient modular water treatment systems that are easy to deploy and that can tap unconventional sources to provide humanitarian water or emergency response. NEWT also develops systems to treat and reuse challenging industrial wastewaters in remote locations, such as oil and gas fields to help energy production be more sustainable and more cost-efficient in regards to its water footprint. The talk is hosted by Barbara D. Mackey '14 and James A. Ferrendelli, M.D., at Canopy.

4. Writing Jefferson's Life

In this presentation, John Boles will explore the problems and possibilities of writing a full-scale biography of Thomas Jefferson, a man who lived a long life, was involved in everything of importance in the nation for more than 50 years and had enormously wide-ranging interests. And if that were not enough, Jefferson's life was filled with seeming contraction and both triumph and tragedy. How can one make sense of this man and understand him in his own historical context as well as our own? Join us for this account of the challenge of writing about this enigmatic man, which will be hosted in the home of Julie '72 and David Itz '72.

Howard R. Hughes Provost

Professor of Statistics

Professor of Bioengineering

Founding director, Children's Environmental Health Initiative

6. Children's Environmental Health

This conversation will explore how children's health and well-being are shaped by the places where they live, play and go to school. Although it is widely agreed that health and development are determined by multiple forces, surprisingly little is known about the interactions of those forces. Adverse environmental exposures often occur in communities facing multiple social stressors like deteriorating housing; inadequate access to health care; poor schools; and high unemployment, crime and poverty, all of which may compound the effects of environmental exposures. Miranda will discuss these important components of children's environmental health at this dinner hosted by Amy L. Sutton '89 and Gary Chiles '86 at divino Italian Restaurant.

SPECIAL OCCASIONS

William "Bill" Fulton

Director, Kinder Institute for Urban Research

7. 21st Century Houston

Throughout the 20th century, Houston succeeded as a city, in large part, by not being a conventional city. It was sprawling, low-density, auto-oriented, business-oriented and lightly regulated. Public investment tended to focus on business needs, not on neighborhoods and quality of life. Houston in the 21st century is much different. It is among the most ethnically diverse cities in the country. It is increasingly crowded and traffic congestion is growing fast. The economy is diversifying, but competition for young talent is growing among cities all over the country and the world. Houston can no longer take it for granted that young, smart people will move here to get a job. In short, Houston in the 21st century is becoming a different — and far more urban — place than it has ever been before. In order to make this transition successfully, Houston will have to confront — and successfully overcome — challenges the city and its people have never faced before. Y. Ping Sun and David Leebron will host this interesting discussion.

The talk will be hosted by Leticia F. Trauber '86 and Stephen M. Trauber '84.

Retired Brig. Gen. Tom Kolditz

Director, Doerr Institute for New Leaders

10. Leadertainment — Why College Graduates Can't Lead

It seems that we are increasingly disappointed in the performance of leaders — in politics and government, in business and across sectors. We ask rhetorically, "Where did all the leaders go?" The answer: they went to college! Kolditz's talk will center on how people learn to lead, why most colleges and universities fall short of developing their students into competent, confident leaders, and what we're doing to place Rice at the leading edge of collegiate leader development. Harriet C. Latimer '56 and Truett Latimer will host this discussion about one of Rice's newest institutes.

60. A Special Treat – Turley Wines

The stars of this wine basket are two bottles of Turley wine—a 2013 Cedarman Zinfandel and a Turley 2013 Old Vines Zinfandel. Cedarman is a proprietary blend of fruit from both Rattlesnake Ridge and Dragon Vineyards, located at the top of Howell Mountain in Napa Valley. Although primarily Zinfandel, the vintner uses a small amount of Petite Syrah from the Rattlesnake vineyard as well. The result is a truly powerful, dense and wild wine, long on flavor. Dark fruit and wild spice on the nose, while the palate is full, feral but well-rounded and well-structured. Old Vines is composed of a variety of old sites from California that are either too small to be made into a vineyard designate wine or are “new” to the Turley family (and way of farming). Vines are anywhere from 41 to 129 years old, and a true representation of California old vine Zinfandel, hailing from vineyards in Napa, Sonoma, Mendocino, Lodi, Contra Costa, Amador and Paso Robles. Dark fruit, berries, and earth on the nose; medium-bodied, with spice and well-balanced acidity on the palate. A wine with this kind of concentrated texture can only come from truly old vines! The basket also includes cheeses, duck foie gras, specialty crackers, jams, candies, Italian dry salami, peppered salami and sopressata. Donated by Kristin N. Necessary '01.

Miao Textiles (Items 77 and 78)

The Miao people, an ethnic Chinese minority who are well-known for their highly developed sewing skills, made these beautiful textiles. In the absence of a written language, motifs — such as the butterfly, the chrysanthemum flower, the dragon and the spiral — that evolved over generations are employed for their symbolic meanings. Among the most visually expressive articles of embroidered clothing are the baby carriers, and there are two good reasons for this. One is that they serve to advertise — to potential partners in marriage — the skill, imagination and perseverance of the young women who create them. The second is that they are replete with symbols and imagery that are deemed important to the well-being and future fortunes of the children who will ride in them. Donated by Elizabeth and Albert Kidd '64.
